There aren't many cities in the US, let alone California, that have a higher concentration of world-class bars. Visitors to this tremendous city are truly spoiled for choice with great variety available depending on your needs and tastes. If you're planning a holiday to America anytime soon, perhaps to take advantage of well-earned Disney California tickets or to see exciting attractions in San Diego, make sure that you quench your thirst and satisfy your hunger the right way. Take a look at the below selection of San Diego bars that must be visited and note down the ones you'll be visiting during your next trip!

Barleymash

The fun and high-energy downtown bar known as barleymash is an essential addition to your San Diego to-do list. An establishment that looks to celebrate American culture through its delicious bar food and a drinks menu that's supported by the two great US pillars of beer and bourbon, visitors can hardly go wrong when stopping by for lunch or evening drink. Aron Langellier, owner and operator of barleymash, spoke to us about why the bar can't be missed:

“barleymash is a must-experience San Diego restaurant and bar, not only for the excellent food and stellar drinks but also for the high-energy and fun atmosphere. Whether you come to socialize with friends, catch a game or just need to rest your feet while wandering downtown, barleymash is the place to go!

“The menu, designed by well-known San Diego Chef Kevin Templeton, consists of many dishes that incorporate two barroom staples: beer and bourbon. From the barley flatbreads made from scratch daily using local beer, to barleymac and cheese bowls, including one topped with roasted Brussels and whisky-caramelized onions. Chef Kevin strives to source all ingredients as organic, local and sustainable as possible, so guests know they're getting great quality when they dine at barleymash.”
